

CALL BUT FOR STATES CALLED STATES

HISTORY OF KANSAS CHANGED AT PRE-CONVENTION MEET

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

Cleveland, June 4 (US)—With Indiana's four delegate-at-large instructed to vote for Governor Alf M. Landon for President, and the 24 additional Hoosier delegates requested to support him, delegates are pouring into the Republican convention city from every section of the country.

Landon adherents claimed he might be nominated on the first ballot and that victory for him is certain to be proclaimed on the second roll call of the 1001 delegates.

Actual developments of outstanding importance today were:

1—Chief Hauff, executive manager of the Landon-for-President organization, declared that Landon will be supported by a majority of the delegates in all the states west of the Mississippi, with the possible exception of Oregon, Idaho, California and North Dakota.

2—National Committee Frank B. Burns said that the latest check reveals that 12 of the state of Washington's 11 delegates have resolved to support Landon.

3—Former Congressman C. E. Hanson of Virginia, who was secretary to President Calvin Coolidge, declared in a public statement that "this convention is going to be in the hands of the rank-and-file delegates and they are going to support Governor Landon, regardless of the plans of any so-called leaders."

4—John Hamilton, national manager of the Landon campaign, declared in a public statement that "this convention is going to be in the hands of the rank-and-file delegates and they are going to support Governor Landon, regardless of the plans of any so-called leaders."

5—Any report that Governor Landon's supporters have entered into any arrangement with any leaders or any supporters is absolutely without foundation."

6—Nationally announced that the Vermont delegation, arriving here Monday, will support Landon.

7—The Republican national committee began the first of its public sessions in the great convention hall last night to consider candidates for President.

Landon Men Gaim 35 Delegates

By GEORGE R. HOLMES

Cleveland, June 4.—Scrambling like a snowball rolling downhill, the Landon-for-President Republican boom charged along today, picking up delegates here and there and convincing political observers the Kansas governor will be a first-ballot nominee to oppose President Roosevelt in November.

Landon managers, including John M. Hamilton, who is listed to be campaign manager, are modestly claiming "about 350 delegates" on the first ballot. Actually, they know they have more than that number and think there is to be a first-ballot nomination, in the Republican tradition.

Most Republican nominees for the presidency have been named on the first ballot. It gives an atmosphere of solidarity and unity that is a real asset.

OLD GUARD SET BACK
Landon managers can see no slip "twist the cup and the lip." They have counted noses—and were confident there can be nothing but a Landon victory.

They were confident before J. Henry Rorback, Connecticut leader of the "old guard," came out for Coolidge. When Indiana yesterday virtually pledged its delegates to Landon, they privately proclaimed it as a victory.

It is significant—almost a week before the convention opens—that the Landon people are taking of the vice-presidential rather than the presidential nomination.

It is significant—almost a week before the convention opens—that the Landon people are taking of the vice-presidential rather than the presidential nomination.

Chairman Henry F. Fletcher announced that the finances of the Republican national committee are in "excellent condition." The committee has a treasury balance of $100,000 as compared with a deficit of $200,000 when Fletcher assumed the chairmanship from which he retired last week.

The committee has been operating "on a pay as you go" basis, he said, and was loudly applauded.

Fuller O. K.

Of Bates Is Surprise

Former Governor Alvan T. Fuller today set Republican and Democratic circles talking as a result of his surprise endorsement of Mayor George L. Bates of Salem as the Republican candidate for Lieutenant-Governor.

In his statement the former Governor declared that he had not consulted Mayor Bates and that his only reason for suggesting him was "my desire to see Massachusetts restored to a self-respecting administration of its affairs."

From his Salem home today Mayor Bates declared that the thought of becoming a candidate for lieutenant-governor had not occurred to him, but he added:

"I am certainly gratified by former Governor Fuller's statement."

Fuller says: The endorsement of Mayor Bates by Mr. Fuller, endorsement which would be welcomed by more than a few Republican candidates in the state, indicates that the "Work Progress Administration" is not the "Work Progress Administration" in this state.

"He has traveled the granite road of hard work. He knows the problems of the men who start in the state, and he is dependent upon his own brains and brawn to make his way. Bates, I imagine, is no different. But he is sincere, is of unquestioned integrity, and he has the loyalty of all the citizens of Salem regardless of their political or religious affiliation, for Joe and the voters strong for Charles."

"Before we get into the convention, it looks like Foster Stearns for state librarian to break the O'Riordan deadlock, and James McMan for a $600 job on the Industrial Accident Board—about next Wednesday."

Just at this point somebody pats the rap on the door again and says: "Senator, says the baggage master, 'I do not like to disturb you, but somebody has checked some baggage through to your ticket and will have to enter it in the baggage car and look it over.'"

Well, The Senator is far from pleased, because it looks like somebody has put one over on him, and we all go trooping back with The Senator to the baggage car to look over what has been checked on his ticket.

In Dog House
There is not much in the baggage car, but in one corner is a little doghouse, and the baggage master says:

"So we go over to the little doghouse, and at first we cannot see anything in the doghouse because it is dark in there, but after a while we can see a pair of eyes glowing, and a voice in the doghouse says:

"Gents, what'll it be?"

"Timmy," says The Senator, "is that you?"

"It is me, Senator," says Timmy, "for the love of mud let me out of here."

"Timmy," says The Senator, "you stay right where you are, but shove over. You'll have a lot of company tomorrow."

even though the former is more costly."

TOO EXPENSIVE
If grant you that on a given Works Progress Administration project more men will be employed than under contract or other method but it will cost from three to five times as much and it will exhaust funds that otherwise could be used in employing additional men on other projects.

The tremendous expenditure of money for overhead in the Works Progress Administration should be used for putting men to work."

Asked as to his experience with the political aspects of the Works Progress Administration, he declared:

"People come to my door all day long because it is the public works department. They tell us they are looking for work and they are looking for work."

USED AS CLUB
"The Works Progress Administration is being used as a big club to beat men into line for the Democratic organization. That's the way the Works Progress Administration in this state doesn't want to show its records."

"We are told repeatedly by men that they were instructed to get a Works Progress Administration job. That is the condition all over the state."

For these reasons he is convinced the American people will support a sound program to reform the administrative and political aspects of the Works Progress Administration.

"If the Republican party will use simple words to voters to show them something vastly better than the Works Progress Administration, I am convinced they will welcome the change."

He believes that if relief were administered by local government units the work would be done intelligently, more economically and with greater justice to the people.

This is the program Johnston has outlined for the Republican high command at its forthcoming convention.

TODAY'S
Boon-Doggle

Some time ago, it appears in anticipation of better days to come, the citizens of Cheyenne Wells, Colo., embarked upon the construction of something really handsome in the way of a gymnasium for the local high school.

Just when, how and under what circumstances this occurred cannot be learned from the rather vague records available at the Works Progress Administration offices here. The records do show, however, that the funds necessary to complete this gymnasium could not be raised locally.

As President Roosevelt approved a project to do the job at federal expense.

How much had been spent on this gymnasium before the federal government stepped in is not known. Suffice it to say that just to complete the work the treasury will now provide $29,180, or approximately $20 for every man, woman and child in the town.

Roxbury Auto

Held For 2nd Time

For the second time in two days, Thomas P. Foley, 50, of Cornell Street, Roxbury, appeared in Quincy court today to face charges of driving an uninsured and unregistered car.

Foley was stopped Tuesday by Inspector James Little in Randolph. His case yesterday was continued until June 10 after he had pleaded guilty to the charges.

Yesterday, while driving through Quincy square, he was stopped again by Inspector Little. In court today Foley was held for $400 and the case was continued again until June 10.

Likely Winner

Senator James H. Scammon of Somerville, Democratic floor leader of the upper chamber of the legislature, appears as the likely winner of the nomination for state treasurer.

Other candidates, popular and dangerous to the Scammon home, are Representative Daniel J. Housley of Wintthrop, School Committee Francis R. Sullivan of Boston, and Federal Coordinator Frank E. Foy of Springfield.

Another candidate, former Registrar of Motor Vehicles Morgan J. Ryan, will skip the convention and go directly to the people in September.

Attorney Joseph Santovincenzo of Boston, nominee for secretary of state several times, will be re-nominated. It is expected, without opposition.

State Auditor Thomas H. Buckley of Andover is regarded as already re-nominated. His one opponent is very little known to the state.

Senator Francis M. McKown of Springfield, former Senator Joseph Finnegan of Boston and Attorney Joseph Scipione of Boston are the outstanding candidates for attorney-general, although Attorney-General Paul A. Dever is expected, can have a re-nomination for the asking.

TRAGEDY PRATTLE FOR MALDEN HONORS

Slayer Has HOPE

SHERMAN SEES REPRIEVE

Newell P. Sherman, convicted "American Tragedy" slayer, still believes he will cheat the chair.

The 200-pound psalm singer, occupant of a cell in the Cherry Hill section of state prison, told guards he is convinced he will be reprieved.

He slept well during his first night at Charlestown and today ate the full prison breakfast, according to Deputy Warden Frank Graves. Newell is buoyed up by the hope of reprieve. Deputy Warden Graves said, "He is sure that something will happen to prevent his execution on August 12 for the murder of his wife."

Wails Mother

"He smokes his pipe constantly and seems to find a great deal of comfort in it. Until his removal to a cell in the death house ten days before the week of execution no special favors will be granted him, nor will he be allowed to exercise with the other prisoners."

"There have been no signs that he is cracking under the strain. Already he has borrowed two books from the prison library."

"According to the guards who keep the 24-hour death watch every him, he is in perfect control of his emotions."

As yet he has received no visitors, but it was expected that his attorney and mother would visit the prison soon.

The doomed man was removed from Worcester County jail yesterday.

Husband Is Seized In Woman's Death

Worcester, June 4—While Thomas J. Flynn, 29, was still grieving for the wife he buried yesterday, detectives took him into custody today in connection with her death.

The wife, Gertrude, also 29, mother of two small girls, Gertrude and Alice, died at Worcester City Hospital Sunday.

Death, police charge, was the result of poisoning following an illegal operation. Whether a doctor was directing it or not, they refuse to disclose.

Arthur J. Parenteau, 32, of Hackett street, however, was already in custody. He is a friend of Flynn, and he is named as having taken part in the operation on Mrs. Flynn.

Suspicion arose immediately after the young mother was admitted to the hospital, authorities said. What Mrs. Flynn told doctors is also held secret, but police hinted that her story formed the basis for the charges against Flynn and Parenteau.

Hollywood, June 4 (AP)—The recent marriage of Tony Canzoneri, lightweight boxing champion, to Rita Roy, a show girl, has been a source of some embarrassment to Mrs. Ben Herzhfeld, wife of an advertising man.

Mrs. Herzhfeld's professional name is Rita La Roy. "I'm getting messages of congratulation all the time," she said. "People forget the 'La'."

FOUND: BRAVE PAPA! Parades Hopeful at Baby Show

Although shiny silver cups grace many a home in Malden today, as mementoes of the second annual baby show of Forest Dale Community Church in Malden, few of the children concerned realize what it was all about.

Between 300 and 400 mothers, but only one father, brave-minded into the church to parade their children before the judges.

William Wesley Brown, 19 days old, of Forest street; heaviest was David Chapman, 37 pounds, of Prescott street; and prettiest was Jean Audry Bourque, of Parsons road.

The best looking boys were Neil McDonald, of Cottage place, and Francis Dunn, of Lathford road. Pretty girls included Mary E. MacDonald, of Oliver street, Jean Valerie Walsh, of Hill street, and Ruth Silliker, of Eastern avenue.

Husband Fined $25 In Auto Test Row

Automobile driving lessons for his wife cost John K. McCord of Franklin street, Medford, an added $25 in Malden court today. He was found guilty of striking Damon W. Grover, a Tufts College student.

According to the testimony, Mrs. Margaret Rogers of Medford engaged Grover as an instructor in the operation of an automobile for her daughter, who is McCord's wife.

McCord told the court he ordered Grover to keep away from his wife and that he later saw Grover. Mrs. Rogers and his wife together reported, they intend to discuss with Premier Mussolini the possibility of Italian participation in a three-power alliance against the "German menace."

Diplomatic circles predicted sanctions against Italy would be lifted and that France and Britain would abstain from voting.

TRIBUTE To Mr. Hearst IN WILL

'ANNIE LAURIE' GIVES CROSS

San Francisco, June 4 (US)—A tribute to William Randolph Hearst, the employer for whom she worked for so many years, is contained in the will of Mrs. Winifred Black Bonifis, "Annie Laurie" of the San Francisco Examiner. The will was filed for probate.

Of her employer Mrs. Bonifis wrote:

"To William Randolph Hearst, the only cross presented to me by the Dominicans Sisters. I make this bequest in recognition of the fact that had it not been for Mr. Hearst's kindly understanding I would not have been able to bear the many crosses life has sent me."

The will disposed of a $15,000 home here, property of unestimated value in Sausalito, and 42 shares of Hearst Consolidated Publications stock.

The residuary legacies to her only daughter, Mrs. Winifred M. Barker of Roscoe, Los Angeles county.

To her husband, Charles O. Bonifis, from whom she was legally separated in 1913, is bequeathed a portrait of their two sons.

The stock and two articles of furniture are bequeathed to Paul and Emily Phelan of San Francisco, two of her closest friends and companions during the latter years of her life.

To Juanita Beavers, her companion and housekeeper for many years, is left $1000. Another $1000 is left to her brother, Benjamin J. Sweet of Monrovia, Cal.

The sword which Mrs. Bonifis carried with her, she left to the Chicago Historical Society.

Mrs. Barker is named executrix without bond. The will was signed to Superior Judge Frank H. Dunne, who will hear the petition for probate June 15.

STATE FUNERAL VOTED FOR BYRNS

ROOSEVELT TO ATTEND RITES

Washington, June 4 (INS)—A state funeral for Speaker Joseph W. Byrns in the House chamber was decided upon at a conference of senior House members today.

While arrangements were incomplete, the tentative plan was to hold the funeral on Sunday. President Roosevelt, cabinet officers and the Senate will attend. The President will accompany the funeral train and attend the burial services in Tennessee.

President Roosevelt today ordered all Federal flags at half staff and cancelled his cabinet meeting.

Speaker Byrns, who was 64 years old, died suddenly early today in his home of a cerebral hemorrhage, which followed a heart attack he suffered yesterday afternoon.

His death came less than 24 hours after that of Congressman A. Platt Andrews of Massachusetts, for whose memorial the speaker only yesterday afternoon had appointed a congressional committee to attend a block of services.

He was the second speaker of the House to die during the present administration and the fifth member of the lower branch of Congress to pass away during the present session.

Wife at Deathbed

His wife and two brothers, as well as two physicians, were at his bedside when he died.

Political friends and foes alike voiced their grief at the passing of a speaker whose greatness, in their minds, layed that of the famous figures of Champ Clark, "Uncle Joe" Cannon and Nicholas Longworth.

Serving his 14th consecutive term as member of the House from Tennessee, Byrns succeeded to the speakership when Representative Henry T. Rainey of Illinois died in 1913.

Byrns was born in Cedar Hill, Tennessee, July 20, 1869, the son of James H. and Mary E. Jackson Byrns. He was a student at Vanderbilt University for two years, and in 1900 received the degree of bachelor of laws. On August 23, 1904, he married Julia Woodward of Nashville, Tenn.

Byrns had been engaged in the practice of law in Nashville since 1891. In 1893, he was elected a member of the Tennessee House of Representatives, serving three consecutive terms until 1900. In 1901, he was elected speaker of the Tennessee Senate.

He was elected to the 61st Congress in 1909, serving continuously as a representative until his death. Since 1924 he had been chairman of the Democratic National Congressional committee.

He was a member of the Methodist Church, the Masons, Knights Templar, Shriners, Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias, Elks and Red Men.

Killer's Wife's Story

Black Legion Used Women as Spies

(Editor's note: Mrs. Dayton Dean, former wife of the confessed "trigger-man" in a Detroit Black Legion slaying and herself once a member of the secret society, in a series of articles tells for the first time what she says is the real inside story of activities of the night riders. The second of this remarkable series follows.)

By MRS. DAYTON DEAN

Detroit, June 4—I had heard my husband plot a cold-blooded murder for the Black Legion.

I had heard him talk about seeing that I was "taken for a ride" if I did not keep still.

He had promised me on his word of honor he was through with the Black Legion. Yet he did not keep his word.

I was frightened and I didn't know which way to turn. I knew something terrible would happen before we were through with the outfit.

I am sure Dayton, himself, was afraid then.

Two nights after he had planned to murder a man, and then change his mind when I found out "the boys"—members of the Black Legion—came after him again.

"KILLER" TO THE TOP
He went with me. I protested, of course, but he told me I should hear me, and I knew then it would always be that way.

From that time on, his advancement in the Black Legion was rapid. He was "going to the top," he said.

Then one dawn he came home and told me he was in charge of the death squad. He said he was picked because he had the courage to do the job and was a good shot.

I did not have a automobile which I could use and I made this excuse to Mrs. Amber Clark and to Mrs. Grace Lepp for not being more active in the organization.

You see, everything was by word of mouth and when Mrs. Clark informed me there was a meeting, I was supposed to let each of the women in my section know.

(Editor's Note: Mrs. Lepp is widow of the Women's Auxiliary, wife of Arthur Lepp, head of the Black Legion in Michigan. Mrs. Clark was Mrs. Dean's superior officer, according to Mrs. Dean.)

Dayton and Mrs. Clark told me the woman's job was really spying. We were supposed to report on anything we heard. We were a kind of secret service for the men.

(Editor's Note: I was just such gossip as a woman's story, according to testimony of Mrs. Ray L. Liddy, that led to the murder of Charles A. Poole by the Black Legion. Mrs. Lane testified she "heard" Poole was beating his wife and led the men-folk.)

Dayton told me I was to see what I could learn about George Quint.

Quint was a member of the Legion in good standing, but he had been very chummy with a Catholic man, we were told, and had even stood up with him when he got married.

"We'll have to take him in a straightforward way," party one of these nights," Dayton said.

"We take off the guy's shirt, leave his hand on and give him a good licking," Dayton added.

"We don't have any trouble with them after that," I can tell you.

At that initiation meeting in Pontiac somebody gave a signal and all the lights went out, except one in the corner. Then a lot of Black Legion men in their robes stepped in and the initiation began.

OATH UNDER THE GUNS
We could feel the guns pointing against our backs, for a man stood behind each woman.

You see, they made us repeat the ritual after the colonel.

We were instructed about the password. The men told us that if we wanted to test anybody, even in a strange town, to pull at our hats three times. If we were sure they had answered by a like signal, then we went on to the real password.

"Death!"
If the person approached was a Black Legionnaire he would answer.

"Under the star of the guard."
When I was initiated Mr. and Mrs. St. V. Effinger, national head of the Black Legion from Lima, O., were there. We were told if anything bothered us about the new organization we were to write to her.

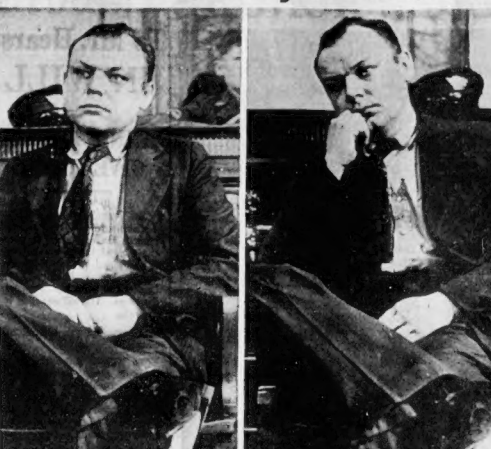

They told us how to get our uniforms. These cost from $5 up. With the riding capes they cost $9.

It was all pretty wild, with the guns and everything. They gave us each a cartridge as a badge of membership, an unfired shell, and as they handed it to us they said:

"Death!"
You can see how we women took that initiation and never talked.

Confessed "Black Legion" Executioner

"I Pulled Both My Guns"

These closeup shots of Dayton Dean, alleged "Black Legion" leader, were made in the Detroit, Mich., courtroom as he calmly confessed to having fired the shots that killed Charles A. Poole. He further declared, on the stand, that he had been ordered by the "Legion" to carry out the execution.

"I Was Nervous"

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

It's a good way to teach them a lesson."

It was shortly after I learned just what Dayton was up to that I was initiated, a fearful proceeding.

At that initiation meeting in Pontiac somebody gave a signal and all the lights went out, except one in the corner. Then a lot of Black Legion men in their robes stepped in and the initiation began.

OATH UNDER THE GUNS

Grand Jury Begins Cult Murder Probe; Guard Dean

Detroit, June 4 (AP)—Unmasking of the Black Legion, whose confessed executioner told an amazing story in open court of a victim's "one way ride," proceeded today in secrecy of a grand jury chamber.

Dayton Dean, who blandly ignored the protests of his own attorney and glare of his 12 fellow defendants as he told yesterday of pumping eight pistol shots into the kneeling form of Charles A. Poole because "you do what you're told to do in the Black Legion," was segregated from the other defendants for his own protection.

The murder examination was in adjournment until Monday, but Circuit Judge James E. Chenevix-Tonger prepared to open a grand jury investigation of a reign of terror ascribed to the hooded order.

Assistant Attorney General Amara and several police, including Inspector John L. Navarre, would lay a foundation today for an investigation of reports attributing a dozen deaths to the Black Legion.

In Pontiac, where 900 persons at a mass meeting adopted resolutions demanding "relentless prosecution" of Black Legionnaires accused of violence, three circuit judges were to be today on a petition for a grand jury.

Burning of Father Coughlin's shrine at the Little Flower, which has been under renewed scrutiny for possible Black Legion connections, occurred in Oakland County, of which Pontiac is the seat.

A former member of the Black Legion, Tico Woody, declared "40 per cent of the office holders in the state and county are in the Black Legion."

DAVIS DENIES HE ORDERED BLACK LEGION'S MURDER

By JAMES L. KILGALLAN

(Copyright, 1936, by International News Service)

Detroit, June 4—Dayton Dean, Black Legion's two-gun "trigger man," was today branded as "crazy" and a liar by "Colonel" Harvey Davis, whom Dean, on the witness stand, characterized as the generalissimo of the sinister "night ride" slaying of Charles A. Poole.

"Colonel" Davis, interviewed by this writer in a heavily guarded room off the cell block in the county jail, denied Dean's charge that he "got up" the Poole execution or that he ordered Dean to blame away at the victim with two guns.

DENIES SEEING SHOOTING
Asked whether he was at the murder scene on the fatal night of May 12, Davis replied: "I was 80 feet away."

"Did you see the shots fired?" I asked the Black Legion "Colonel."

"No," he said, with a straight face. Not only did Davis deny he was a "Colonel" in the Black Legion but he claimed it was Dean who got him to join the secret hooded organization whose members flung an unfired bullet in the palm of their hands to signify to others that they were members. Davis said he was surprised when Dean, a gun in each hand, poured a volley of eight shots into Poole as the victim protested "there must be some mistake" when accused of being his wife.

"I asked Dean why he hell he did it," Davis related. "He said, 'I don't know.'"

"I said, 'You don't know? You have got to get it. Why monkey around with that guy?'"

Asked if he thought the Black Legion, or any other organization, had a right to take a man out and kill him because they heard he beat his wife, Davis emphatically replied: "No, sir."

"I DIDN'T KILL."
Davis looked surprised when I asked if his comrade bothered him as a result of the tragic death of Poole. He said: "No, I didn't kill the man. I didn't advocate that he be killed. I feel sorry for his wife and his children."

He declared he "had no idea in the world" why Dean "put him on the spot" by testifying he ordered the execution of Poole.

Davis revealed he is "through" with all secret organizations. Asked "should the Black Legion be broken up?" he replied:

"As far as I am concerned, I'm done with the Black Legion or any other organization, political or otherwise. They're a lot of bunk. Why being in any organization? I have no faith in political parties. They are all crooked."

Davis related, "I'm not guilty," referring to the Poole slaying.

"Then why did you go out to that spot in the country with Poole?" he was asked.

"I don't know," he answered, slowly. "That's just an unkind part I don't know anything about."

"Where'd you afraid after Poole was shot?"

"Yes, I was afraid I'd get it myself," he replied. "I was afraid of Dean. A guy crazy enough to shoot one guy wouldn't hesitate to shoot another."

He denied his wife ever joined the women's auxiliary of the Black Legion, saying: "I'd have known if she did."

Dad Again At 96; Girl This Time

New Bern, N. C., June 4 (AP)—

George Isaac Hughes, the 96-year-old Confederate veteran who amazed the medical world when he became a father 17 months ago, was all smiles again today and, if he had any, he'd be passing cigars about.

By the light of a crude, old-fashioned kerosene lamp in a small room, another child—a girl, this time—was born last night to his 28-year-old wife, Libby, who became Hughes' bride two and a half years ago.

"It looks like we might raise a pretty big family after all," Hughes commented.

Hughes is vigorous for his age. His faculties are clear and he does odd jobs, chopping wood and keeping a garden.

The Hughes first-born, a husky lad of 17 months, is walking about and is fast learning to talk.

LET KIDNEYS

FLUSH OUT

3 LBS. A DAY

Clean Out 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes

Nature put over 15 miles of tiny tubes and filters in your kidneys to strain the waste matter out of the blood. Kidneys should pass 3 pints a day and an excretory of more than 3 pounds of waste matter.

When the passing of water is scanty, with aching and burning, the 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of aching backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up at night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

If kidneys don't empty 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, your body may take up some of these poisons causing serious trouble. Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, which have been used successfully by millions of people for over 40 years. They give happy relief and help the kidneys to flush out 3 pounds a day. ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Shall Faithful Wife Leave Husband Who's Always Going to Prison?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"My husband and the law can't get together," she writes me, this little mother whose "Pete" is just a repetition of in jail and out of jail.

"I was 20 and he 22 when we were married. Soon we had a baby girl. A year later, a boy. We might have lived happily together, Pete and I, if he had not met that corner gang.

"The fourth anniversary of our marriage found Pete in the reformatory. Five years was what the court said. Yet, I, after valuing about every political and welfare agency in the state, succeeded in freeing him on parole in 32 months.

"Together, we resolved to begin anew, to live just for our babies. Pete seemed sincere, but he wasn't. Three months later he was back in prison—for violation of parole. The news came to me as I lay in the hospital giving birth to my third child.

"The baby died—possibly will be did—and I returned home to my other children. Again I began my rounds of the welfare agencies. Again I succeeded. Pete was home again.

"He can't fall this time, I told myself. He means too much to me and the babies. He must be straight. And yet, with only 14 more days of his parole left, Pete is back in jail. The charge is armed robbery and that means years to serve, probably in State Prison.

"This, Miss Fairfax, has been my married life. One heartache after another. Humiliation upon humiliation. Disgrace for myself. Poverty and misadventure for my children. And, as though that were not enough, Heaven has seen fit to ordain I shall be a mother again in August.

"Please, dear friend, tell me what to do. How can I save my husband?" ANNA B.

MY DEAR ANNA:

I should say your husband was far beyond the saving stage. Crime with him seems to be pretty much a habit, and there isn't much anyone can do about it. The individual must have the will to save himself. Lacking this—as your Pete apparently does—the sympathy of wives and interested persons and agencies is just thrown away.

Who did you husband steal? Was it to obtain food and comfort for you and the children? It was it for the bravado of being the law, for making a fellow of himself with the "corner gang"? Would he have asked if he were neither a husband nor a father?

"Some questions you must answer, Anna. You must satisfy yourself to what extent you and the babies influence your Pete's conduct. And if you find that you are subordinate to the gang, then it is time to call your marriage off its feet."

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

In another week the full torrent of commencement addresses and commencement orations will be raining down on us, and those of us who are particularly interested in such things will be watching with some interest, if not eagerness, to note words of wisdom, or, with even greater interest, to note words of unwisdom and, especially, words of sheer inventiveness, or what the French, I believe, call blague.

In that respect addresses to graduating classes are like political speeches. We'll be hearing some of them, too, out at Cleveland next week. The blague will be preponderant. A few may say and witty things, a few will commit howlers, but mostly it will be blague.

There was a time when we did not need to worry. In the safe and peaceful days before the war, when nothing very much happened and it looked as if nothing very much was going to happen, commencement addresses could be safe and conventional.

And yet, as we look back, we can see now that the boys and girls to whom these conventionalities were addressed were going to live through a great war, a great boom, and a great depression, about none of which they were either forewarned or forearmed.

Youth Will Be Warned Of All Sorts of Things

These days the chances are that the addresses will err on the side of sensationalism. Our youth graduating this year will be warned against all sorts of terrible things.

There will be little pointing with pride; there will be plenty of viewing with alarm, especially on the part of the clergy and the statesmen. That is why I should be inclined to bar both from the rostrum and turn to the plain men, the men who have kept businesses going, and met payrolls, and tried their best to keep people employed, and hoped that, after all, in some way, we all will muddle through.

I am inclined to think that the remarks of such men will be more useful and nourishing than the remarks of men who use these addresses as stalking horses for their pet ideas.

I have all this in mind because within a week I shall have to make at least three of such attempts to enlighten the young. And since they will be made to three widely different groups, the usual and stereotyped thing will not do at all.

One will be made before a private preparatory school of men who will presumably go to college, who represent the "privileged" group; one will be made to the graduating class of a city high school, many of whom will presumably not continue their education further but will go to work. And one will be made to the members of the Technology crowd, who will not take anything I say seriously—and I don't blame them.

Last year the graduating class wrecked the University Club. On this coming year, I hope things will go by opposites, and they may even happen briefly.

Canned Addresses Of "Great Men"

I often wish that it were not the custom to invite visiting firemen on these occasions but let representative boys and girls from the graduating classes tell what they think it is all about. I have no doubt that their speeches will be as cogent and as much to the point, more sincere, even if more naive, than the canned addresses of "great men."

Up to some 15 years ago the Technology graduation consisted of exercises by half a dozen students recounting the results of their own senior theses. Much of it was deadly dull for the audience, but at least the speeches dealt with something the boys had worked out for themselves and knew something about at first hand.

Next week the graduates, faculty, and families will listen to Newton Baker, secretary of war under Wilson. I have the very highest respect for Mr. Baker. I should have been glad to see him nominated for president in 1932. But I doubt if his remarks will be as useful and to the point as some of the ideas of the graduates would have been.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Marjorie McBride

Hardy pioneers of colonial days bowled on the green when they had the time. They'd learned the game from their forefathers, who came from England. When the Boston Tea Party was brewing, the rebels condemned it as pro-English.

Bowling is coming back in New England. Golf and tennis players are taking it up. It's no longer considered an old man's game.

Franklin Park is opening a municipal court this summer. Brookline Country Club has a team that's been bowling for four years. Francis R. Parks is chairman of the bowlers at Brookline. Other bowlers MARJORIE McBRIDE there are Robert J. Dunkle, George Vose, George Williams, Dr. W. J. Badger, Jr., A. Winsor Weld, Paul F. Clark and John Heard. Most of the men mentioned have won trophies in competition with other teams. Incidentally, most of them will be found in Dun and Bradstreet's or the Social Register.

Over in Plymouth, old England, they're still bowling on the very lawn where Sir Francis Drake was surprised when he learned the Spanish Armada was headed toward Perfidious Albion.

Bowling on the green is quite unlike bowling on indoor alleys. There are no pins to knock down. The ball weighs three and one-half pounds. The green is 120 feet long. A small white ball, called a "jack," is the goal.

In regulation play, four-man teams are the rule. Each team has a captain, named "skip." He seems to have the authority of a skipper at sea. He stands back of the goal, or jack, and calls the shots.

Quintuplet Influence Extends to Stockings

Is there no limit to the influence of those Duane Quintuplets? Now the management at Best's is putting out stockings in units of quins. You get two pairs and a spare.

Orchestra leaders have their own jargon. Maybe it simplifies matters. Suppose Jack Marshall, Boston maestro, wants to tell his men to play a peppy tune, and follow it up with a sleepy waltz. He says:

"We'll go to town on the button hooks and snail race home on the windjammer and porkchops."

In their lingo, "going to town" means hot, fast music. A dreamy waltz is a snail race. Saxophones are "buttonhooks." A banjo is a porkchop, and an accordion a windjammer. Chimes are known in the orchestra pit as radioros. Clarinets, as icorice sticks. Bull fiddles, of course, are dog houses. Even a layman who's heard their growls knows that!

Sometimes They Live With Married Sisters

With the closing of schools close at hand, teachers are relaxing enough to chuckle over examination papers. One South Boston instructor is particularly pleased with an essay she received on the subject of "ants."

The cherub had written:

"My subject, is ants. There is two kinds. Insects and Lady Ucces. Sometimes they live in holes and sometimes they live with their married sisters."

Unless his press department's over optimistic, Raymond Moore, Cape Cod producer, hasn't relinquished hope of presenting Roger Rogers in a play at Dennis this summer.

She'd like to appear in "Breakfast with V-nora," a piece by Fred Ballard of "Believe Me, Xantippe" fame, and if she can make her Hollywood engagements fit in, she will journey East and do it.

Brains as well as beauty will count in the selection of "Miss American Mutual" to be crowned queen at the American Mutual Associated outing next Thursday. Such virtues as reliability, integrity and understanding are qualifications in the contest. John Quincy Adams of Belmont will be the awarding judge.

Girl Saved In River-Plunge

PATROLMAN AIDS RESCUE

Plunging into the Charles river from the Moody street bridge, Waltham, an attractive 21-year-old West Newton girl was rescued from drowning today by a passerby and a police officer.

At Waltham Hospital, where she was treated for immersion, the girl gave her name as Miss Beatrice McKenzie, and said she roomed in a house in Maple street, West Newton.

A married sister living in Falmouth street, West Newton, was notified by police and her husband, Charles Manning, came to the hospital and brought the girl to his home after she had been treated. Police said witnesses told them the girl was walking across the bridge when she suddenly toppled over the railing and plunged 50 feet into the river.

Edward Condon, Cherry street, Waltham, a night worker who was returning to his home, was following a short distance behind the girl and leaped into the river to rescue her.

As he struggled toward shore, Patrolman William Poff reached the scene. The officer assisted the couple and assisted in bringing the girl to the shore.

FLOYD GIBBONS' PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

Death in the Sands!

The Tragic Story of Five Children Who Played Too Long

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

You know, boys and girls, I'm far from being a pessimist, but every time I read a story like this one I'm about to tell you, I begin to think there's something wrong with the world. Understand, I've got nothing against Adventure. It's one of the stronger spices of life. It keeps men on their toes. Life would be pretty drab if there were no hazards—no risks—no thrills to look forward to. But when a bunch of kids have a ghastly experience of the sort young Don Schaeffer of Haverbrook Heights, N. J., had when he was a six-year-old boy—well—that's when I start rearing up and yelling, "there ought to be a law against this sort of thing."

It happened on a hot Summer day 12 years ago. Little Don, along with four other kids from the neighborhood, started out to go swimming. Don lived in the town of Wycoff, N. J., then, and there was a swell swimming hole just about a mile away. It was a hot day, and all the way the boys passed an old sand pit. They had all been forbidden to play in that pit, but it looked so cool and inviting that—well—they just forgot what they had been told.

They waded and cooled off for a few minutes and then began to play a game called King of the Hill, in which one kid got up on a little shelf on one side of the pit wall and the others had to try to pull him off.

Of the five boys who were playing that game, two were Don's brothers, Jack and Ed. The others lived nearby—Joe and Forest. Don's brother Ed, who was the oldest, was all for quitting and getting out of the sand pit. He didn't like the looks of the steep bank of shifty sand that towered so high above them. But the other kids were having fun and didn't want to leave, so he stayed on, too.

They went on with their game until Don's brother Jack fell from the side of the hill bringing a big shower of sand along with him. Again, Ed said they'd better get out of that pit, and this time the other kids were inclined to agree with him.

But by that time it was too late. Already tragedy was in their midst. Even as they talked of leaving, a great wave of sand started coming down from the top of the wall. It grew larger and larger, and then—suddenly—the whole side of the pit began to groan and rumble.

Don doesn't remember much of the next terrible half-minute. All he knows is that he turned to run and that sand kept coming down and covering his ankles at every step he took. He probably didn't take more than two or three steps, and then something hit him on the back with violent impact and he went down. He struggled to get up again, but all at once his struggle ceased. He couldn't move a hand—an arm—not even a finger. Then, suddenly, he realized why. He was buried in sand up to his chest. With a violent wrench, he got one arm loose—then the other. Again he renewed his struggling, trying to work the rest of his body out of the sand. "I fought for what seemed hours," he says, "and finally worked myself free. I looked frantically about for my four companions. I saw Ed and Forest digging their way out above me, and a poor, wringing hand that reached up pitifully out of the sand below."

I ran toward it. Was it my brother—or not? I fell on that sand like a swimmer, scurried away around the head and saw the agonized face of my brother Jack. As fast as I could push the sand away, it came back again in small slides that covered him up deeper than ever. I was terrified, but I kept on working. Soon Ed and Forest came to help me. But even with three of us working it was all we could do to keep his face clear so he could breathe.

Jack was gasping and coughing and pain. The pressure of the sand was mashing him, for a few minutes he hung so that it was all but impossible for him to draw a breath. Don couldn't stand and agonizing groans. He jumped up and ran toward the sand, so excited and so full with terror that he didn't even notice that he had lost his shoes when he fought his way out of the sand. A car came along the corner, and the driver put on his brakes at the sight of the struggling men, a sixteen child who came racing toward him. He saw that with fear was Don that he didn't stop. He ran to the car, and in a sobbing heap under the car he lay for a few minutes, and then he was pulled out and carried to the hospital.

Says Don: "I was trying to tell him what was wrong, but the words wouldn't come out of my mouth. Finally, though, I made him understand, and he began to get up. He got my brother out, and then—suddenly—all thought of fear."

Four little boys went to school. Not a word they saw a sign of him. The man ran back to his car, drove to town and got a volunteer crew to come out and dig through the sand. A half-hour later they uncovered a lifeless little body with a purple face and blank, staring eyes. "We boys," says Don, "ran crying out of that pit, and sobbed our hearts out on the way home. Don had been buried for nearly half an hour."

Now, just to end up on a happy note when you are going to send in that yarn. Write and what are you going to do with the ten bucks you may get for it?

Tomorrow I'm going to tell you a thrilling and happier adventure story.

HANEY ON BUSINESS

Money and Industry VALUES MUST BE WEIGHED To Attain Balance

By LEWIS HANEY

(Professor of Economics New York University)
New York, June 4—Today I will answer an accumulation of questions from New York, Londonderry, Manchester, N. J.; Washington, D. C., and Philadelphia.

(1)—"Is money a product of industry?"
Ans.—No. Not in any usual sense. Gold is a product of industry, and has a value which is affected by cost of production and demand for consumption. This makes it available as a standard for money. Inconvertible government notes are just promises representing government debt.

(2)—"In exchange do we not merely swap money for goods regardless of the value of either, so that neither the value of gold nor the value of goods is measured, but only the quantities of each?"

Ans.—No. We cannot exchange money for goods without at the same time measuring the values of both. When I give $5 for a hat, I show that I value dollars and hats in the ratio of 5 to 1.

(3)—"Should prices not be determined by cost, and the dollar therefore be a measure of cost; and should labor time not be the unit of cost?"

Ans.—Most emphatically, no. Our wants for things are fully as important as our costs. No matter how great the cost to make a thing, if nobody desires it there is no demand for it, and it has no value. The dollar must measure value, and value be determined by both desire and cost.

Cost cannot possibly be reduced to labor time. In the first place, labor costs are not in proportion to time, and one man's labor hour may be very different from another's. In the second place, there are important risks and sacrifices required in production, which are in addition to labor. Unless they are rewarded, there would be little production.

(4)—"Is gold money affected by inflation and deflation of value?"

Ans.—No. Gold may increase or decrease in value in a gradual way, depending upon changes in supply and demand. But it cannot be inflated or deflated as paper currency or credit can be. Of course, by devaluing the gold dollar, less gold is put in the dollar, but that does not mean that the value of gold (as a metal) is changed.

The "price" of gold is affected by inflating currencies, just as the price of other commodities are. Inflated paper dollars buy less gold, just as they buy less meat.

(5)—"How will the final adjustments be made in the de-funct dollar, the national budget, and the national debt?"

Ans.—The dollar is not defunct, but is devalued, and off the gold standard. Eventually it will have to be made convertible into gold, either 59 per cent of the old amount, or less.

The budget can be balanced now by stopping the wasteful spending at Washington. Eventually, it must be balanced, but probably it will not be until our debts have become so large that we will find the burden of payment too great. Then our politicians will repudiate it for us. This they will probably do by devaluing the dollar further. Say the debt is 40 billion dollars. The government then cuts the dollar to ten, and calls a half-dollar a "dollar." It then pays 50 cents on the dollar, which is a 50 per cent repudiation. The Roosevelt administration has already made a 41 per cent repudiation.

(6)—What is "distribution?"

Ans.—In economics it is not transportation or delivery of goods. It is the sharing of the national income among the people, presumably according to the economic value of the services they perform. It concerns the payment of wages, interest, rent and profit.

(7)—"Do you think the railway employees would have received the demerit wage if they had had no union? Do you favor or oppose organized labor?"

Ans.—I think the railway unions had a great deal to do with getting the demerit wage. I favor organized labor.

Collective bargaining is recognized as desirable by all economists. We merely hold that as labor gets power through organization, it must assume responsibility for the use of that power, and must recognize the rights of the enterprise and capital with which it must co-operate in production.

BANKERS AND OF Now Talk POLITICS BONDHOLDERS BETTER

WEST AGAINST MONEY ISSUE

By Meryle Stanley Ruker
(Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service)

Chicago, June 4—A favorite topic these days among the financiers of La Salle street is national politics.

At the moment, they are more interested in gossip about the forth-coming political conventions than in the trend of interest rates or the prospective price of logs.

They are inclined to believe that in the coming months there will be a big investment position in the market. They emphasize that the payment of the bonus in a fortnight will head off normal tendencies toward seasonal recessions, even talk of the appearance of a prospective temporary shortage of new automobiles.

There has been some moderate pessimism in the market for new commercial loans—more than the market for the old.

The reason for the disparity lies in the fact that the total figures published represent the demand for new loans with the gradual increase of the old loans. Accordingly, the net effect has been a big investment position in the market for the old loans.

With interest rates approaching the vanishing point, the question of bank earnings is still uppermost in the minds of operating heads of the great banks.

Under present conditions, the best profit makers are those who have strayed furthest from commercial loans—those who have taken a big investment position in government securities as well as those who have done considerable lending on real estate. Under the present arrangement, a banker must choose between "log" and "gold."

As one gets away from the Atlantic seaboard, there is not much interest in the campaign.

Thoughtful financiers think that it will be a tactical blunder for the opposition party to tie itself up with a definite time schedule for returning to the gold standard and large monetary questions.

One informed Middle West banker, when queried about monetary stabilization, said: "That merely means sharing the gold with the foreigner."

The head of a great banking institution thought that the party in power after the turn of the year would have to feel its way in monetary matters, and could not long in advance reveal its schedule to the public.

It seems certain that neither party will advocate going back to the old gold dollar, and revaluing gold and operating on a gold standard. That is beyond practical possibility.

Among the opposition, however, there is strong sentiment for devaluing the dollar, and for the discretionary power further to devalue the dollar, holding that that right should be returned to Congress.

A really scientific study of sound currency will reveal that inflation did not begin when the country went on the gold dollar, but that there were inflationary mistakes, making as early as 1927, even while the country was on the gold standard.

FOR MID-WEST RAILROAD

By Associated Press

Washington, June 4—A substitute proposal was advanced today by Senator Shipstead (F.-L. Minn.) for the bondholders' plan to reorganize the Minneapolis and St. Louis Railroad, which he said had "some serious defects."

However, in a letter to Philip Roosevelt of New York, chairman of a bondholders' reorganization committee, Shipstead said he considered the bondholders' plan "far better" than the membership proposed by Associated Railways, a group of competing carriers.

Roosevelt had proposed lifting the road from the $200,000,000 debt to a $1,000,000 loan from the Federal Reserve Bank.

Chairman Jesse Jones of the RFC said the plan was "a good one."

Shipstead, chairman of a Senate Interstate Commerce subcommittee, said the plan was "a good one."

He suggested a reorganization could be effected "without a home in additional bonds to answer, without stock ownership and control in one individual, and very likely without a complex debt corporate stock (representing the stock of the companies), the plan is not, altogether obscure."

Shipstead wrote Roosevelt that the bondholders' committee should have no trouble in borrowing the entire $200,000,000 from the RFC and then from the Federal Reserve Bank.

The RFC would give the $200,000,000 in the form of $1,000,000 in 200 shares of $1,000 each.

Shipstead said the plan would be to keep the control of the railroad in the hands of its owners. The bondholders, if necessary, could take the 100,000 shares at $100 a share, to raise another $10,000,000 if needed.

Shipstead said it might be wise to recall Jones before the committee on the Federal Reserve Bank approval to the Associated Railways plan, which involved a $200,000,000 Federal loan, subject to acceptance by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The Roosevelt plan called for issuance of $200,000,000 in new bonds to replace $200,000,000 of old bonds and formation of separate operating and financing companies.

Social Security Charges

OFFICE OF SOCIAL SECURITY TAX ON PAYROLLS

The corporation stockholders' interest in the effect of the social security tax is reflected in the accompanying chart. Employers are subject to a tax on their payroll of 1 per cent this year and 3 per cent in 1937.

Here we have a group of large corporations showing the effect of next year's 3 per cent tax on payroll. American Telephone and Telegraph Company, with an average payroll of over $212,000,000 will have to pay $2,120,000 in such tax. This is $1,120,000 more than the $1,000,000 it will be unchanged.

The chart also shows how much the social security payroll tax this year amounts to per share for the selected common, common stock. For this purpose the tax rate is 1 per cent of 1935 payroll.

It is evident that in companies where the wage cost is proportionately high the tax will be more severe on stockholders.

Frank Fay Revisiting Vallee On Air

By N. F. T.

An omission of something near to that is reported as in store for Frank Fay when he returns to bolster the Rudy Vallee radio hour (WEEL) of various dual diversion between 8 and 9 o'clock tonight.

Fay figured largely in the success of the Vallee "mike" variety some months ago. It could be justly said that he is a Frank put on considerable punch to aid in the program, otherwise thought to be lagging with a side order of patrons at the time.

Of course, some alert producer, packed Frank Fay to air up what his part in the program contained. Ipo change, presto! a new found, himself.

"N. F. T." star in his own right, coasting along on a broader to border broadcasting hook-up.

Politics and pre-convention politics, the Democratic forces will occupy Postmaster General Hays' evening (WBZ) at 8:30, his address originating in Springfield, Mass. on the "Town Hall" hour—9 to 10 o'clock.

A subscriber of Salem writes to ask the name of the air artist now known as "The Red Headed Music Maker." He is Wendell Hall and still going strong.

Seminarily effortless, but ever as effective piano playing technique for all of his sharp and flat-nosedness is pointed to the 4th, 5th, 6th and 7th keyboards. Johnny Lane, (half-bait talent handler, known the name of Dick Curt and Glen, the singers, now calling them "The Trio Grande" and it is their first. . . FRENCH STRIKES Cause Heavy Offerings of Francs

By Wylie King
London Financial Times

(Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service)
London, June 3—Spread of the French strikes caused heavy offerings of francs today and sympathetic weakness in the Dutch and Swiss currencies. All three closed low against the pound sterling.

The fresh advance of the Netherlands bank rate, although it was expected, accentuated the nervousness.

The Bank of England and Bank of France vainly endeavored to stem the fall of francs. The Bank of England eventually withdrew from the market after buying an other $400,000,000 of francs.

It is still thought that Leon Blum, who is to become French premier tomorrow, will try a gold embargo and exchange restrictions. These, it is argued, are likely to result in forced devaluation in the future and more favorable conditions.

British government bonds were fractionally easier. Chinese bonds were 1 1/2 to 2 points down. Equities were mostly easier in anticipation of next week's settlement. Rails were dull as a result of the continued wage dispute, even though weekly traffic figures were good.

The dropped an additional 5 points, starting from double bonds. Wheat futures rallied on advice from the United States.

Disinfect Our 'Newsreels'!

SOVIET propaganda in the so-called "newsreels" of the "March of Time" will continue on EVEN A LARGER SCALE than has existed heretofore, according to its alleged "official cameraman in Soviet Russia."

These purely COMMUNIST-A-P-PROVED scenes have been made and photographed in Russia by Julien Bryan.

Bryan is a professional lecturer on Soviet Russia, was a member of the National Committee of the Communist Friends of the Soviet Union in 1933, was a tourist conductor to Russia for the "Open Road" in 1933 and in 1934 for "Intourist," official tourist agency in America of the Soviet Union, and he also was one of the Maurice Hindus party to Russia in 1930.

BRYAN gave an illustrated lecture at Washington Irving High School in New York City on May 15, 1936, under the auspices of "Soviet Russia Today," organ of the Friends of the Soviet Union.

Alexander Lev, of the staff of that Communist periodical, introduced Julien Bryan in these words:

"MR. BRYAN WAS OFFICIAL CAMERAMAN FOR THE 'MARCH OF TIME' IN THE SOVIETS. YOU WILL BE ABLE TO SEE COMPLETE PICTURE STORIES OF RUSSIA TODAY IN THE NEW 'MARCH OF TIME' PICTURES TO BE SHOWN WITHIN A SHORT TIME AT YOUR THEATER."

Lev also told his audience in this AMERICAN HIGH SCHOOL auditorium that Bryan's pictures of "Russia as it is today" are sold in "3000 LOCAL OUTLETS," and that they are also AVAILABLE ALL OVER THE UNITED STATES.

Bryan himself said to the audience: "I have made 80 reels of pictures in Russia. I stopped in Hollywood and high motion picture executives spent three hours looking while I showed them on a screen there. THEY INSISTED MY PICTURES HAD NO COMMERCIAL VALUE. HOWEVER, 'MARCH OF TIME' IS USING MANY OF THEM, AND YOU WHO WANT TO LEARN MORE OF THE SOVIET AS IT IS TODAY SHOULD SEE THE 'MARCH OF TIME' PICTURES."

As no Russian scenes can be shown in this country in the "March of Time" or elsewhere that are not APPROVED OF BY THE RUSSIAN GOVERNMENT, it follows necessarily that these Bryan pictures, which the Hollywood producers turned down as of NO COMMERCIAL VALUE and which Bryan says will be shown in the "March of Time," are PURE PROPAGANDA FOR COMMUNISM.

For otherwise, these pictures would NOT have been shown under the auspices of the Friends of the Soviet Union.

This is a direct violation of the Roosevelt-Litvinoff Treaty.

As the Hearst papers pointed out recently, the "March of Time" scenes from Russia, which are bought from Julien Bryan, are NOT NEWS, but are almost all STUDIO SHOTS manufactured by or for the Russian Government to show Americans the alleged "success" of the Stalin five-year-plan.

PICTURES SHOWING THE REAL SUCCESS OF THE AMERICAN CAPITALISTIC SYSTEM IN THE LAST 160 YEARS WOULD NOT BE PERMITTED IN RUSSIA.

Neither the "March of Time" nor any of our American newsreel companies are permitted to go into Russia and take scenes ad lib., as, for instance, the following scene:

"ODESSA, U. S. S. R., MAY 26 (AP).—ELEVEN ALLEGED ANTI-SOVIET AGITATORS WERE SENTENCED TODAY TO FORCED LABOR AND TO PRISON TERMS FOR SEEKING TO CREATE CONDITIONS WHICH 'WOULD BE FAVORABLE TO A BOURGEOIS STATE IN CASE OF WAR.'"

This "bourgeois state" is, simply, a democratic republic wherein THE INDIVIDUAL IS FREE.

These tyrannous acts you will NOT see in Julien Bryan's Russian scenes.

The public has cleaned up the motion pictures in matters of immorality and general filth, but they have not cleaned them up in the matter of SUBVERSIVE PROPAGANDA AND FIRST AD TO COMMUNISM.

There is an opportunity for loyal citizens to exert the same pressure on disloyal pictures that they exerted on indecent pictures.

Some pictures still need DISINFECTATION.

THE "March of Time" is aiding and abetting the Russian Government's purposes in America.

This is a humiliating state of affairs and should arouse all patriotic organizations and our loyal citizenry in general to protest against use of American newsreels to glorify the AVOWED ENEMY OF ALL AMERICAN INSTITUTIONS.

Lehman's Retirement

HERBERT H. LEHMAN'S decision not to seek a third term as Governor of New York has apparently been accepted as final by the leaders of the Democratic party.

There is still talk in the Empire State of a "Draft Lehman" movement.

But the movement has not progressed. For one reason, Governor Lehman himself dampened enthusiasm by reiterating his intention to withdraw from politics.

Another reason why the movement languishes is that President Roosevelt and National Chairman Farley appear to have given the idea up.

Both were in the State recently, immediately after the Governor's announcement was made, and neither of them saw Mr. Lehman.

In view of Mr. Roosevelt's confident Jefferson Day prediction that Mr. Lehman would be "compelled" to run again, this aloofness was significant.

MEANWHILE, eschewing politics, the Governor is devoting assiduous hours to clearing away, by veto or approval, a vast mass of bills left on his desk by the Legislature.

This unpretentious devotion to duty is typical of Herbert H. Lehman.

His four years in the Executive Mansion have been an uninterrupted period of arduous work and of some notable achievements.

The outstanding accomplishments of his administration have been substantial improvements in the administration of civil and criminal justice, and considerable advancement toward relieving the taxpayers of the State of the mountainous burdens of excessive local government.

On the debit side, the fiscal position of the State has not been improved.

Taxes have been heavily increased, and a big debt has been incurred for unemployment relief. In addition, the expensive Democratic tradition of "social legislation" has continued to add to the general cost of government.

THESE CONTRADICTIONARY aspects of the Lehman regime are easily explained. The Governor's constructive performances have been his own.

Financial difficulties, in the form of a hundred million dollar deficit, were inherited from Mr. Roosevelt, while the undeniable extravagance of the Lehman administration must be imputed to following the aims and philosophy of the New Deal.

Unquestionably, the Democratic party needs his campaign strength in New York this year.

But no less unquestionably, it seems, the Governor finds it imperative that he return to his private affairs after eight years in public service, and let future political honors fall where they may.

Fancy Ships But No Checks

ARRIVAL of the Queen Mary, latest of a series of foreign super-liners of which the Normandie and the Rex are other conspicuous samples, makes simple Americans wonder why Britain, France and Italy do not pay back the billions they owe us instead of building aquatic palaces.

It's a constant, trans-Atlantic parade of bigger and better ships—BUT NO CHECKS.

More checks and fewer ships would make a bigger hit with the average American.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

You've made a mistake? And you're miserable because of it? The thing's like a creeping poison in your veins—like a chain around your ankle? Yes, I know. I've made a mistake, too. And I tell you, about it, I'm thinking back and forth, wondering how differently I'd act if I had it to do all over again. Wishing I could. I could, no use feeling that way, partner. There's only one way to feel when you've made a mistake. And that is—

Elsie Robinson
Thank God for it!
Is sorry of course—deeply, honestly, lastingly sorry for the hurt you gave the other fellow who didn't deserve it—and make what sensible amends you can. But as far as you yourself are concerned—
—Thank God!

Thank God for the courage and curiosity in you which impelled you to make that mistake. For these same qualities which landed you in the mud will also—if you have the gum to use them—lead you to the stars.

THE ROOTS OF LIFE
Courage and curiosity—these are the very roots of life. Unless creatures had been curious and courageous, life would never have crept out of its primordial slime. Unless humans were curious and courageous men would still be little better than two-legged cabbages. Thank God you're not a cabbage! Thank God that you have curiosity enough to want a better break—and courage enough to try and get it.

Yes, it's true; life is never peaceful nor safe for curious and courageous folk. And such people do many things which they bitterly regret. As you and I have done. But we mustn't, we can't let that stop us. We value growth and progress.

FOR PAIN IS ALWAYS THE PRICE OF PROGRESS—PAIN FOR YOURSELF AS WELL AS FOR OTHER FELLOW. You must learn about life before you can live it. And you can't learn until you try.

Being hurt and giving hurt (which is even harder on a decent human to bear) is the price one must pay for a new venture—or even for a blundering one.

A harsh philosophy? Perhaps. But I don't invent it. Life is full of life. Life is full of life. Life does not say you mustn't make mistakes, or expect you not to make them. Nor does it mind too greatly if you do make them. Life demands only that you GO ON—in spite of mistakes.

So if you've made a mistake, and hurt someone else as well as yourself, make what you can. Be decently sorry, make what amends you can. Then forget it!

Thank God that you have whackadoodle to be growing human—and GET GOING!

New York Day by Day

New York, June 4.—The yearly income of the bridge expert by Cuhbertson is conservatively estimated at $500,000 net. He has a million dollar estate in Connecticut, an elaborate estate at a Fifth avenue hotel and dines the most expensively of any gourmet in the metropolis.

All this is the result of the circuitous climb of a once destitute emigre from Russia, John Kobler, in an informative magazine article, calls him America's shrewdest, diabolical, and in the bargain, the Baron of Bridge. He has been able to sense the headlines as no other exponent of his time.

He is one of the most ingratiating personalities of the day. I recall meeting him myself at the home of Charles M. Schwab. A suavely dapper type with just a hint of foreign accent, he has that engaging frankness for which so many strive and so few achieve. He looked on me as an antic, so one thought.

Yet to visit his high-powered and expansive offices atop Rockefeller

Center Plaza shows what his command of imagination has done in extracting a fortune from an "ordinary" deck of playing cards. Here his wife salvages $65,000 a year with syndicated articles and lectures.

Louis Bromfield, the author, continues his wanderings in India. The other day I was privileged to read extracts from a letter he wrote to the editor of a monthly magazine. He said among other things: "... I have been to Penang, Singapore, Macassar, Bali (a great disappointment), Samarang, Batavia, Sumatra (levelly) and now we are in Mysore for the shooting. Day before yesterday I got a huge tiger—a beauty, a magnificent brute where we live in luxury with the best possible food. The animals come all about in the evening and you go to sleep listening to panthers coughing and whining just outside the compound..."

Then there is E. C. Segar, the creator of the Popeye cartoon, who is to be honored by a large canning community in Texas. The originator of the movement believes that Segar, because of his exploitation of Popeye's favorite dish, has made the growing and canning of spinach one of the profitable enterprises of the Southwest. The large expansion of the industry is due to the birth of his cartoon series.

And Popeye has more people

Clothes of the Future

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

H. G. Wells, in his moving picture, "Shape of Things to Come," is recurrent to his ultra-modernistic utility in an important respect, it seems to me, this writer. The people who dwell in his race-and-dimension Utopia of a hundred years hence, having ended the fashion world of the fables which afflict the planet, are just a bit taller in the matter of their clothes than any of their predecessors. And that's saying a lot.

They wear a sort of starched poncho about as comfortable and convenient as a piece of sheet iron, with a hole in it, which, with lights below, makes an incredibly grotesque effect. Mr. Wells has a way of taking H. G. Wells by the scruff of the neck and shaking the foolishness out of him, but here he seems to be lying.

One can understand this just by reading the newspapers. Here the International Association of Garment Manufacturers announces that the fashion of the coming "poured suit" is as follows: "You are encased from top to toe in a rigid, light-weight, synthetic material. They just pour on your suit of millions, a new chemical get-up which is said to have the quality of the textile. Just as soon as you cool off, you stroll out done up in lemon yellow, light red, blue or rose, and high but more tailor-made citizens. No further fitting or alterations will be required."

From the beginning of time, man has been harried by somebody or other trying to make him wear more or less clothes, or different clothes. Away back in primitive times, they find clothes in the form of animal skins of tribal "mores"—tribes of tribes and conformities, particularly the latter—were said to be deeply imbedded in racial differences. A new chemical in dress. There is a curious and persistent feeling that any marked change in dress is somehow immoral and culpable.

France has built up and safeguarded her fashion leadership of the world by government subsidies and by various forms of state aid. This might appear to be merely good business, but there is in the French people an innate feeling of the inviolability of French fashions which has caused some strange doings.

THE GENUINE public clamor over the invasion of foreign fashions led to the formation in Paris of "Le Club des Habits Noirs," a sort of Parisian version of the Ku Klux Klan to repel foreign styles. With all the members' masked faces, they met at midnight with a lot of solemn hour-glass comparable to that line—once a month, they met at moon mad when any considerable number of people get to fusing about clothes.

By a California legislator in 1921 making a public appearance in a hosiery-street, punishable by ten years in the penitentiary. At the same time, the most aggressive concern of millions of run-of-the-mill citizens is not what to wear, but to get it, particularly in times like these. Which suggests a happy ending for this discourse.

These quaint old clothes shops in New York's Elizabeth street, down near the Bowery, are coming to be known as "The Old Time Store." Three years ago people were buying old clothes. Now they are buying new clothes. That's good news, even if they pour us into a sea of blue and lemon yellow suit with sleigh bells on it.
